

At one in the bathroom

Paco Jaanson has released Inka, a semi-recessed basin which wraps around a ceramic countertop make them one unit.

The bench becomes one with the washbasin by superimposition, guided by templates, and is fastened by a push screw device to hold it securely in place.

Inka is available in black, white and chocolate tones for both the countertop and the basin. The pieces are complemented by a variety of finishes and surfaces such as matte, gloss, watermark and zebrano.

The collection has two washbasin sizes (40 cm x 40 cm and 40 cm x 60 cm) that can be arranged in pairs, side-by-side or mounted on a cabinet.

There are four countertop size options available.

Italian design group Kerasan is responsible for the ceramic bathware design and has been creating ceramic products for over 40 years.
