Upstanding: Rogerseller will unveil Australia's first steam bath.

VANESSA WILLIAMS

Rogerseller is set to unveil an Australian first in bathroom designs at this year's Saturday in Design in Melbourne — the Hammam Touch & Steam.

Based on the design concept of Italian company Effegibi, the Hammam Touch & Steam incorporates the healing properties of a steam bath into a shower enclosure.

An LED-illuminated panel activates the steam flow at the touch of a button and features controls for temperature and lighting.

It is said to create the relaxing sensation experienced after a Turkish bath, along with other well-being benefits including stress reduction, clear skin and calm breathing.

Held on August 6 and 7, Saturday in Design is an annual trade event showcasing a range of furniture, finishes, fixtures and lighting products by well-known brands and emerging designers.

With clean lines and organic curves, the latest addition to Fowler's Regent range of basins and toilet suites is a sophisticated option that is ideal for narrow vanities.

The Regent Inset Semi-Recessed Basin is set into the vanity so it is partly enclosed by it, making the front section protrude slightly beyond the edge of the bench, saving space.

The design has a generous bowl area, low profile and softened edges, resulting in a finished product that Fowler spokeswoman Phoebe Bourke said inspired elegance in a modern bathroom setting.

"This product is a great addition to a range that offers homeowners contemporary, chic and elegantly understated resort-style bathroom ware," Ms Bourke said.

The latest range of bathware accessories by Ascension incorporates style and high technology design.

Distributed by Paco Jaanson, the range is inspired by Art Deco industrial design.

The product of a collaboration between professionals in the architecture, graphic, industrial and fashion design sectors, the accessories boast an artistic flair that oozes elegance and style.

Finished in chrome, the accessories add a contemporary yet modest look to bathroom decor. The bathware line ranges from towel rails, glass shelves and towel holders to wall mounted brush holders and robe hooks.
