Iacchetti designed Paco taps

The latest in bathroom tapware comes from Paco Jaanson, which promises that its new Batlo range will be the most unusual collection of mixer taps seen in years.

Designed by Giulio Iacchetti, whose work is included in the permanent design exhibition at the Museum of Modern Art in New York City, the ultra-modern collection has smooth curves that complement the flow of the water from the spout.

Basin sets, wall sets and bath spouts are made from solid brass and come in a choice of brushed nickel and chrome finishes. Prices are from $420 for the wall mixer with diverter, and up to $965 for the bath set with hand shower.
