

“

We use very thick stainless steel and the quality is very good.

Sink teeth into new range

WASHING up, washing hands, preparing meals — the humble kitchen sink is a often a neglected, but well-used, part of the kitchen.

But Paco Jaanson's new range of tapware is sure to catch your eye.

Ari Zorlu, the managing director of Paco Jaanson, said the new range will cause quite a stir.

“With design orientated, up-to-date design, they cater for a range of budgets and styles,” Mr Zorlu said.

“The good thing is, there are four different ranges.”

The Artisan is the most versatile design, it is both stylish and practical.

Mr Zorlu said that the Palermo is the most popular design.

“It's got a variety of styles,” Mr Zorlu said.

“It's well priced and you have it either flush, inset or under mount.”

The Sardinia and Corsica carry the same great looks and influences as the Artisan and Palermo style.

“They are very contemporary and versatile,” Mr Zorlu said. “We use very thick stainless steel and the quality is very good.”

“They come in a range of sizes and you have the ability to choose how you would like them to be set.”

With a style to suit all budgets and homes, the Paco Jaanson range of sinks cannot be beaten.

You could give your sinks the attention they deserve with this new range from Paco Jaanson.

For more information please visit:
pacojaanson.com.au